RISK MANAGEMENT POLICY: OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH & SAFETY

No operational or administrative process is of greater importance than the health and safety of employees and the preservation of the Company's property and assets.

To achieve the above policy statement, management has set specific objectives, these being:

- The development of a risk management prevention programme to eliminate unsafe acts and conditions
- The implementation of a risk Control programme to reduce loss-producing incidents thereby increasing productivity and efficiency.
- The establishment of a fire prevention programme to safeguard employees and assets
- The establishment of a well-managed security programme to safeguard employees and assets
- The implementation of an effective occupational health programme to safeguard company, employees against occupational disease and injuries, and to provide an HIV Aids prevention and support programme
- The implementation of training programmes and operational practices that will safeguard employees.

It is the right of all employees to work in a healthy and safe environment free of injuries. This however can only succeed with the active participation and co-operation from all.
